I understand football as a game, through which we have the opportunity to make people happy. This vision is a responsibility that drives me to take my profession very seriously.

I like the team to have the ball, to look for space to move forward, to dominate the game and, when we lose the ball, to get it back very quickly to continue attacking.

My aim is for the players to understand the game and for the team to be identified by their style of play.

To achieve this, I base my methodology on the Positional Play, through which we will practice all the phases of the game during training sessions, in which the ball is always present, as it is the protagonist of this sport.
